WHEELING, FEBRUARY 12, 1895.

A Brutal Affair.

The brutal assault committed yesterday morning at the Pan-Handle station in this city, by striking glassworkers from Martin's Ferry, upon a defenseless man who was enroute to St. Clairsville in answer to a summons from court to act as witness against indicted strikers, was one of the most cowardly affairs that ever occurred in this community. It is a case that calls for prompt action on the part of the authorities.

There is no palliation for the crime, for crime it was. The victim of the assault was obeying the order of a court and was going peacefully about his business. He had been assured by strikers that he would not be interfered with and was unprepared for an attack. When he arrived in Wheeling he was set upon by a number of men and brutally beaten, narrowly escaping with his life, while his assailants escaped to the other side of the river.

The merits of the issue between the strikers and the non-union men who have taken their places at the Buckeye works have nothing to do with the matter. An outrage against the law, which is made to protect peaceable citizens from violence, has been committed, and public sentiment will not sustain the deed, no matter what grievance, fancied or real, the union men may have against the men who have taken their positions. The Intelligencer does not believe that this act of violence is endorsed by law-abiding labor men, who believe in a peaceable and manly way of settling their disputes. A resort to violence never yet won a strike, and affairs like that of yesterday are condemned by cool-headed, honest union men, as well as by all who sympathize with them.

The authorities should make a rigid investigation of the outrage and, if possible, bring to justice the perpetrators.

Speaking of the weather, the worst seems to be over. However, we do not advise our readers to lay away their winter clothing yet awhile. There's nothing so uncertain as a prediction that there will be no more zero weather.

Should Do Something.

When the President notified Congress that ten days would be given in which that body could take action that would save the country $16,000,000, by passing a bond bill, it was thought by many that some move would be made to meet the question, but so far it seems that nothing is to be done. The responsibility lies with the element in Congress that is determined to obstruct every proposition for relief that does not make a complete surrender to the free coinage faction. It is no wonder that the people are out of patience.

The New York Tribune reflects the exasperated state of public opinion when it says: "It is particularly unfortunate that this Congress closes its performance with a failure in duty so disgraceful. It was hard to bear, the people thought, when the Congress deliberately gave away 10 per cent of the value of imports by reduction of duties, making a present of about $70,000,000 to foreign manufacturers and traders. It was dishonorable enough that Congress voted $16,000,000 to the sugar ring and $12,000,000 to the whisky trust. But its refusal to vote for the protection of the national credit involved a gift of about $16,000,000 to the foreign and American bankers who undertook to provide means for the government in its necessities, and the people may well say that it is a little too much."

At this juncture, when those charged with the responsibility to deal with the situation fail of their duty, it seems that the Republicans should take the matter in hand and come to the relief of those Democrats who show a desire to maintain the integrity of the nation, and pass a bond bill. Partisanship should not stand in the way. Perhaps the Republicans can present some such bill as that of Mr. Sherman or Mr. Reed that will meet the emergency and receive the support of the sound money Democrats.

The policy shops were raided by the police Saturday night, and yesterday morning Mayor Caldwell, for the first time in his career as police judge, was called upon to prosecute such cases. This is significant in view of certain claims that were made by our esteemed contemporary during the recent city campaign. These policy shops were known to exist by the police force that the Register wanted re-elected, in the interest of "good government," and to vindicate "a faithful performance of duty."

The Whisky Trust Scandal.

Startling exposures made in Chicago Saturday before United States Judge Grosscup furnished an illustration of how the whisky trust has been manipulated by its late president. This trust has, ever since its formation six years ago, been one of the most vicious organizations in the country. Its record has been a series of defilement, congressional inquiry and the courts from the start, and it has stooped to the most corrupt methods to accomplish its ends.

The trust was organized in 1890 with a capital stock of $35,000,000, and it very soon developed that the principal object of its managers was to make of it a vast stock-jobbing concern. As is described by one of its historians, "legitimate business operations were only a secondary object, and quotations on the stock were made to fluctuate as the designing officials dictated." An end was bound to come to the conspiracy, however, and now the chief conspirators have run up against a United States court, where there is a somewhat sensational struggle between the management and the rights of the stockholders.

The Chicago Times briefly sums up the status of the case as follows: "The president of the company, who since its birth had been its guide, surreptitiously threw it into court under peculiar circumstances, apparently to avoid an impending investigation. Without their authority or knowledge he caused two persons, one a minor and neither a stockholder, to be made plaintiffs in a friendly suit to wind up his company. He entered the latter's appearance and immediately procured his own appointment as receiver, at a time when he confessed to have been 15,000 shares short of the stock. This was evidently done to perpetuate under the protection of the court a power the abuse of which seems to have brought his trust to an abrupt end."

Greenhut was not only bounced from the receivership by Judge Grosscup, but he must now answer to what the counsel for the stockholders terms a "villainous, malicious, infamous contempt of court," and a rule has been issued against him, and very serious consequences for him are pretty sure to follow.

The incident calls attention to the laxity of the law which permits the appointment of an officer of an insolvent company to its receivership. A law prohibiting such a thing would be a protection to stockholders against dishonest managers.

A Chicago couple have just been married for the seventh time after having been divorced from each other six times. They declare that they intend to stick together this time, as "it is cheaper to live together than it is to pay lawyers' fees for divorces." Having had an abundance of experience they ought to know.

Congenial Spirits.

Grover Cleveland will go down into history as a letter-writing and message-writing President, and the future historian who makes a collection of his state papers will produce a very readable volume, judged from a literary standpoint. But it is not as a writer of public papers alone that Mr. Cleveland shows up to advantage; his private misadventures to friends, that occasionally find their way into print, are often interesting, as they sometimes throw side-lights on his social nature.

For instance, during the trial of a case in a New York court the other day, a letter was introduced, as evidence, which was written by the President years ago, when he was sheriff of Erie county, and before he ever dreamed that he would be the executive head of the nation. It was simply a note to a friend, congratulating him on his marriage, and was worded as follows:

William: I am amazed and dumbfounded, but I congratulate you, and from the bottom of my heart. A long life of perfect bliss and married contentment, I hope, may be yours. I go to find Bessie, with whom I shall drink the health of the newly married.

The deposition does not state whether or not the writer found Bessie, nor does it state how many bumpers were quaffed to the health of the bride and groom, and which of the two "got 'em up" the oftenest, as these facts do not seem to have been material to the case. However, it is presumed that Bessie, who is now a member of Mr. Cleveland's cabinet, wasn't far away, and that the "health" was duly indulged in. The letter is a valuable contribution to history, as it shows that even in those early days Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Bissell were congenial and convivial spirits.

A little tilt between Mr. Morris, of Ritchie, and Mr. Campbell, of Ohio, enlivened the session of the house of delegates yesterday, but it was quickly over and business proceeded. Such incidents serve to relieve the monotony of a legislative session, and are not necessarily serious in their results.

La Gasconne's Trip.

The arrival of La Gasconne, the French liner, nine days over due, relieves the universal anxiety about her safety, which has been felt for several days. Though hope had not been given up, grave fears prevailed that the big steamer had fallen a victim to the rough weather, and many anxious hearts were relieved when the announcement came that she had arrived at Fire Island. As was predicted by the authorities in shipping circles, the delay was due principally to an accident to the steering gear of the vessel.

The experience of the passengers was, of course, thrilling, and it is safe to presume that there were many on board who resolved, during the trying days of the struggle with the storm swept ocean, that if they were spared to reach land, this would be their last sea voyage. The trip, under the circumstances, was a triumph in its way, and its safe ending a cause for rejoicing.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

A Boston lady in England says that when Anthony Hope (Hawkins) wrote "The Dolly Dialogues" he had never met a grande dame and his knowledge of the world of women was confined to his mother's quiet rectory drawing room and the companionship of several demure elderly sisters. Those gay butterflies, like delicious Lady Dolly, were creatures of vivid fancy.

The number of pounds of maple sugar tasted at the government laboratory at Montpelier, Vt., for the year 1894, which stood about 70 degrees, was 5,257,430. There were 102,385 pounds rated above 90 degrees, 4,537,036 above 80 degrees and 537,417 above 70 degrees.

The biggest runaway story of the season comes from Orr's Island, Me., where a frightened horse, with sleigh attached, is said to have leaped clear over a team without either himself or the sleigh touching it.

It so happens that the leap years coincide with the years that are divisible by four, and thus they may be known. Of the years concluding centuries, only every fourth is a leap year.

THE ANTI-POOL BILL.

"Anti-Pool" Says It Was Killed by a Democratic Lobby From Wheeling. To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

Sir:—The following appeared in the Charleston dispatches of the INTELLIGENCER to-day:

A communication in the INTELLIGENCER of Friday called forth a little comment in legislative circles yesterday. It was signed "Anti-Pool," and stated that a Wheeling lobby is here working against the anti-pool bill which passed the senate recently. All this is news here. Many lobbyists are being done on this measure it is being done so quietly that no one knows of it. The measure has not yet been taken up in the house, but when it is it will be given the consideration it deserves, and each of the members from Ohio county will vote on it according to its merits as he sees them, all lobbyists, real or imaginary, to the contrary notwithstanding. C. B. H.

It is not my purpose to have a controversy, even of the mildest kind, with my good brother, "C. B. H.," but when he says that "if any lobbying is being done on this measure (anti-pool) it is being done so quietly that no one knows of it," he is mistaken. People in Charleston, members and others, do know of it. And they know that there was a lobby from this city in Charleston for the purpose of killing that bill, and they know that in the main it was a Democratic lobby, and worse still, it is known that the lobby was successful, and that the bill is killed, or what is just as bad, if it comes forth from its present hiding place at all, it will be in such shape, that the gentleman from Randolph will hardly know it. By the way, some people say that even he has gone back on his own off-spring. Suppose C. B. H. looks into this matter a little more carefully. Anti-Pool. Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 11.

Literary Notes.

Mr. Howells has a fondness for naming his novels with a phrase from Shakespeare, and everybody will recall, as examples of it, "A Counterfeit Presentment," "The Undiscovered Country," "A Modern Instance" and "A Woman's Reason." In his two-part story which begins in Scribner's for March he returns to this habit and names it "A Circle in the Water," from the phrase "Glorious like a circle in the water," etc. The question which he asks and answers in this story is, if fame ends "by broad spreading," do not infamy and shame end also?

Dykeman, Druggist, Catskill, N. ## THE DEBT QUESTION.

Col. Benjamin Wilson's Views on That Important Subject.

In an interview published in the Western Democrat, ex-Congressman Benjamin Wilson, of Clarksburg, expressed the following views on the debt question:

"I have not seen Hon. Andrew Edmonston's resolution, but understand it to have stated that the legislature would not consider that subject upon the basis of the Virginia resolution. That was in the right direction and correct as far as it went, and in my opinion it did not go far enough. Considering that West Virginia is required under the enabling act of Congress creating the state to pay its equitable share of the old state debt, upon what is commonly called the Wheeling basis—that is to say: In a settlement when it shall be made give to each state credit for all the taxes and revenues paid by it into the state treasury and charge to each state the amount of money paid out within its limits for internal improvements. This is substantially as I understand that basis. It has been a long time since I examined the subject, and having none of the papers before me now, I cannot speak with accuracy.

"As I remember, about 1872, or shortly before that time, the general assembly of Virginia appointed a commission to treat with a similar commission to be appointed by West Virginia, and as soon as an appropriation was made to authorize it, the governor of West Virginia appointed a commission, consisting of Hon. Jonathan M. Bennett, Gen. John J. Jackson and Mr. A. W. Campbell, who went to Richmond for the purpose of ascertaining in connection with the Virginia commission the state of the debt. But the latter refused to meet them. Our commissioners, all well informed gentlemen conversant with the subject, having had the benefit of Mr. Bennett's long and large experience as auditor of the state of Virginia, ascertained and reported by their original, or perhaps a supplemental, report that West Virginia owed to the mother state a very small amount, if indeed, anything at all.

"Now, West Virginia being required by the act creating it a state to settle its share of this debt upon the basis above given, should at all times be ready to do so, and if it shall not it will be proceeded against by suit in the supreme court of the United States, and the pretext for that suit will be that it has defaulted in this regard. It will be published far and wide, in Europe and America, as a defaulting state, and I cannot imagine of anything that would do us more harm. It would deplete our credit at home and abroad, cripple our industries, public and private, when there is no occasion for it. I doubt whether we owe anything, but if we do, we can very promptly and easily pay it, and certainly should do so without the discredit and injury to be apprehended from a suit."

The colonel further said that the legislature should, before its adjournment, express the willingness of the state to settle the debt question on the Wheeling basis.

Before consulting you I was the most wretched among women, unable to walk or sit up in bed, and now I owe my good health all to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pelllets.' I gained twelve pounds while using the first bottle of 'Prescription.' I send you my picture together with my most heartfelt thanks. ## IT STOPPED THE FITS.

And no Sign of Them Ever Returned.

What a Bright and Original Woman Succeeded in Doing.

Fits are Terrible Things, but There is One Sure Way to Conquer Them.

Every time a child has a fit it takes a fearful stride towards the grave. They sap the very life's blood and drag from the wasted nerves the foundation of life itself. The whole nervous system is affected, and the nerve centres are fearfully weakened.

It is just here that the peculiar and wonderful action of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is so strongly seen. The disease simply cannot resist it. The very first dose often produces a change for the better, and from that minute the nervous symptoms grow less.

The child who has fits, St. Vitus' dance, or other nervous diseases, generally has poor blood. Right here again come in those virtues which have made Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy indispensable to the sick. It makes the blood rich, pure and of vigorous circulation.

Mrs. J. Learmonth, of 776 Broadway, South Boston, Mass., who had employed physicians unsuccessfully, finally determined to give her child Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"At ten years of age," said Mrs. Learmonth, "my daughter became affected with a nervous condition which soon developed into St. Vitus' dance. It was pronounced by the attending physician to be a very severe attack.

"The month would be drawn spasmodically far to one side, the hands and arms were restless and constantly twitching. Her limbs also were weak; her ankles bent under her so that it was almost impossible to walk."

MRS. J. LEARMONTH.

"She was so nervous that she would scream almost like a maul and then have fits of crying. After two months' treatment without a cure, I concluded to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"Three bottles entirely cured her. She is now thirteen years old and has been well ever since, and to-day is a picture of health."

Fits will never stop themselves. Remember that. The one sure way to permanently cure them is to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It quickly and completely cures St. Vitus' dance, epilepsy, hysteria, and all manner of nervous spasms and convulsions, as well as that nervous irritability which often results in fits. If your infants or children are restless or sleepless, cry out, or erit their teeth at night, they are in great danger of nervous troubles. Give them Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will make them strong and well. This remedy is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless for children of any age. It is the discovery of Dr. Greene, of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York City, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter. Use his great remedy and consult him at any time.
